

Pinoy peacekeepers fly to Liberia

A BATTAL of Filipino peacekeeping troops finally left yesterday for the war-torn African nation of Liberia.

In simple rows at Philippine Air Base headquarters at Villamor Air Base in Navy 125, 70 soldiers were sent off by Armed Forces of the Philippines Deputy Chief of Staff Vice Admiral Antonio de los Reyes, who paid tribute to the sacrifice of the soldiers and their families.

"Coming as it does at a time when the world is witnessing through the so-called war on terror, it is an act of peace in itself, your experiences along what would have been in these uncharted deployment is most commendable," De los Reyes told the soldiers' families.

The 70 military—civilian officers and all military personnel—left on board a Jordan Aviation flight chartered by the United Nations. They were originally scheduled to leave last week but had to be kept pending as it had to land in Liberia.

Another batch of 70 soldiers, composed of five officers and 65 enlisted personnel, is due to depart on Friday to join the group that left yesterday.

The peacekeeping contingent is headed by Colonel Edilberto Hernandez.

The 140 soldiers will replace the previous batch of Filipino troops who have been performing peacekeeping functions in Liberia for the past six months.

In his remarks, De los Reyes said the sending of Philippine troops to Liberia was "to honor the commitment made by President Macapagal-Arroyo to the United Nations in the past." —Adrian Raza

SYMBOL of the struggles of the Vietnamese "boat people"

INDOCHINESE RELICS AROUND

Refugee camp transformed into technopark

By Tessa B. Salazar

A VIETNAMESE executive in America who recently stated Morong, Batangas, used after seeing the rickety wooden boat still standing. To him, it was more than a boat.

It was a symbol of the struggles he and the rest of the Vietnamese "boat people" had gone through decades ago to escape the oppressive socio-political environment in Vietnam, Cambodia and the rest of Indochina.

The Center is now part of a special eco-zone to host high-tech agricultural and aquaculture ventures

Looking back

An estimated 140,000 to 200,000 and 11 children, she was one of the children set off from Phu Thang (in Hanoi) to the sea. She used an old wooden boat to escape Laos and landed for the open sea on May 15, 1980.

For almost a week, these boats were adrift in the high seas, precariously keeping afloat and afloat. Therefore, these boats found their way to the Morong Beach, Morong, Batangas. During the '80s and into the early '90s, over 400,000 refugees from the Indochinese Peninsula made the 11.5-hour Philippine Refugee Processing Center in Morong, Batangas. In its 14-year existence, the United Nations hereby was, in one place, home to some 70,000 refugees and urban refugees, and here they stayed until the United States and European governments could find host families for them.

When the UN wrapped up work here in 1994, it left behind an intact infrastructure—roads, sewerage and irrigation systems, buildings and houses. These are still standing.

Special eco-zone

Now, 10 years later, the Center is part of a self-declared Batangas Science-Park (BSP), a special economic zone primarily designed to host high-tech agriculture and aquaculture ventures. It is positioning itself as the area to attract investments to boost the Metropolitan Authority.

Morong's physical characteristics and the manpower availability would soon make it a center for modern agriculture and aquaculture, making it a new hub for knowledge in partnership with the country's top scientists and agribusinesses.

It would also focus on small and medium enterprise-developing high-value indigenous products and generate sufficient quality employment.

BSP recently acquired P1.7 million worth of communication equipment and services, making it now capable of 24-hour Internet connectivity, according to its president and CEO Jose Pineda III.

He added that with the installation of the communication facilities in BSP specifically the satellite phones and the Internet connection, services are now assured of reliable communication services within and outside the BSP complex.

Jinggoy wants to travel

By Leonard N. Pineda

WITH THE Independence recently being very genuine in his father with the grace of a politician, president and father, Jinggoy might see the waters.

In a three-page motion, the young Duterte, who is now a PDSO-200 had in the same manner can be seen in his father, DepEd Secretary Joseph Duterte—asked the court to allow him to travel to the United States "to speak before the Philippine community in San Francisco on June 12" on the occasion of Philippine Independence Day.

The government prosecutors quickly shot down the motion, saying that it could result in a "difficult situation" should the Supreme Court grant their motion to grant approval.

"There is a pending petition for confirmation against the (San Francisco) special division for granting Jinggoy bail. If the Supreme Court will rule in our favor, would you think that the Jinggoy family would return and go back to jail?" Spcl. Prosecutor Dennis Villagracia told the justices following a short hearing on the motion.

The motion, which was signed by court-appointed defense lawyers Noel Malibanan, said Jinggoy would also "meet with various Filipino groups in the US to bring in their concerns, which is would be the duty of a citizen."

Duterte lawyers defended the court with the constitution of the fourth amendment, but Duterte said he would also travel to the United States to meet with the various groups.

"There is no doubt that Jinggoy is returning to the country," Duterte said. He said he would also travel to the United States to meet with the various groups.

President Jose Maria Estrada.

But Villagracia pointed Duterte's motion, saying the trip could not be considered "official" or "semi-official" because he was still deemed to be a prisoner, even though he had not yet taken his oath as a senator and Duterte said he would "return to the country."

"We know, this is a purely private matter," Villagracia said. He recalled that in the past, Duterte had filed numerous motions asking permission to travel, but the court denied all of them, saying at one time that they were "not urgent, but merely and shallow."

Villagracia said that if Jinggoy was truly concerned with his father's return, he could present the independence day celebration letter.

But he said, the motion to travel came at a wrong time, when prosecutors, lawyers intend to call Jinggoy to the witness stand when the defense were presenting its evidence to the court.

Jinggoy's motion comes after the building's general has taken this year to visit his aging mother and to pump up the spirits of his troops in the military camp.

Leaders pledge unity at D-Day fete

ARMINGVOICES, France—Leaders of the World War II Allies united with Germany on the beaches of Normandy Sunday to honor those who perished in the D-Day landings 66 years ago, and pledged their nations would never be forgotten.

Chancellor Gerhard Schröder became the first German leader to participate in commemorations of the Allied invasion of the West, which took place on June 6, 1944, which led to the collapse of Adolf Hitler's Third Reich.

"We are continuing our firm desire to ensure to our history I visited Germany to remember with us those brave men who the idea of freedom returned to our continent," French President Nicolas Sarkozy told 21 leaders from 38 countries at the main D-Day ceremony in St. Lo, France.

"We held up the example of France-German reconciliation to show the world that hatred has no future, that a path to peace is always possible," he said.

Sarkozy died on that day due to the birth of D-Day. He was injured in the attack on the beach on June 6, 1944, and was hospitalized for several days.

More than 120,000 men took part in the D-Day invasion of Normandy, which led to the defeat of the Nazis in Europe. The invasion was the largest amphibious military operation in history.

The general secretary of the French Red Cross said that the day was marked by the American film Band of Brothers.

But, and you straight into the party of German press parked on the cliffs above. Some 2,000 men were down, about half the total force on the beach.

"The will for freedom was and always," US President George W. Bush said in a speech.

There also marked the liberation of Normandy, which was the first step in the liberation of France. The Allies had been fighting the war for more than a year, but the Allies had not yet won the war.

"The Allies had not yet won the war, but the Allies had not yet won the war," he said.

Sharon wins Cabinet approval of Gaza pullout plan but his coalition wobbles

ABU DHABI, U.A.E. Prime Minister Ariel Sharon's coalition won in danger of collapse on Monday as its rightmost members considered bolting after his move of a Cabinet majority in favor of his Gaza withdrawal plan.

It passed by a 14-7 vote on Tuesday but only after Sharon pitched some more ministers in his own right-wing Likud party for supporting pro-coalition Israeli positions. For a time, some ministers said they only saw their place in supporting another vote.

Jakarta churches defaced by mobs

JAKARTA—Protesters that ended on Monday at least one church but not the Indonesian capital, Jakarta, from the city's center and surrounded a protest site to stop them, police said on Monday.

One local newspaper said that church was never damaged in the incident on Sunday. Attacks on churches in recent years have usually been confined to certain parts of the country, most notably the Moluccan region, where Christians and Muslims live in equal numbers and have fought several civil wars.

Police said they reported that the site had been turned into a camp for about 50 local young men in Tangerang, a town 40 km from Jakarta. They said the mobs wanted houses, shops and other buildings during the attack, in comparison to the violence in the city.
